kiwanis anniversary

Kiwanis serving the children both here and abroad

BY ROBERT POZARYCKI
 rpozarycki@queenscourier.com
 @robbpoz

They're professionals and novices, executives and staff members, retirees and working people — spanning every class, creed, race, ethnicity and every other demographic imaginable.

No matter who they are, the men and women who are part of Kiwanis International clubs in the U.S. and overseas have one mission, which happens to also be their motto: "Serving the children of the world."

More than 600,000 people worldwide are part of Kiwanis International and they raise more than $100 million annually toward a variety of causes such as Project Eliminate, which brings life-saving tetanus shots to children in third-world countries. Kiwanians around the globe annually devote more than 18.5 million volunteer hours to their club and related activities — that's the equivalent of 770,833 days, or a little more than 2,111 years.

Local Kiwanis clubs also serve children in the communities they serve by sponsoring "Builders" and "Key" clubs in area schools. Kiwanians serve as active mentors to teenagers and adolescents in helping them help people in need and teaching them charitable lessons that go far beyond the classroom.

They also sponsor Aktion Clubs, which provide assistance to adults with developmental disabilities; and Circle K, a collegiate service group based at more than 500 campuses around the world.

But while Kiwanis clubs perform serious work, members also help raise funds through a variety of fun activities from luncheon meetings to community days at local parks.

One can find such an example of fellowship and fun at the Kiwanis Club of Glendale, which generally meets every Thursday afternoon at Zum Stammtisch Restaurant. The meetings usually have a theme celebrating culture (such as Italian Day or German Day), local community leaders (such as Principals Day or Clergy Day) and holidays. In addition to enjoying a fine meal, members also contribute during an open forum by paying "happy dollars" to announce good news such as a new job, a wedding or a birth, a new member to the club or even a sports team's victory.

The Glendale Kiwanis and others in Queens and Brooklyn also offer up a variety of community events including concerts, street fairs and raffles inviting members of the public to contribute. Members often donate their own time and money to help organize and purchase needed items at each event.

Funds raised by each local Kiwanis club helps not only the organization's projects but also local projects benefitting their neighborhoods, from improving gardens to renovating schools.

Along with helping others, the Kiwanis clubs also provide a great opportunity for professionals to network with their peers and leaders from around their communities and regions.

Those interested in joining Kiwanis International can attend an upcoming meeting of their local chapter or visit www.kiwanis.org for further details.

Kiwanis celebrates its 100th anniversary

BY ANTHONY GIUDICE

@A_GiudiceReport

Kiwanis International is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

The Kiwanis was founded on Jan. 21, 1915, in Detroit, Michigan. On Nov. 1, 1916, The Kiwanis Club of Hamilton, Ontario, was chartered, making Kiwanis an international organization.

By 1916, a year after its founding, the Kiwanis had only three clubs with about 500 members; today the Kiwanis has nearly 600,000 members with clubs in 80 nations.

Those clubs and members address the unique concerns of their own areas, while tackling larger global issues. Members of the Kiwanis hold around 150,000 service projects, raise approximately $100 million and contribute more than six million hours of service each year.

As Kiwanis grew around the world, it grew locally as well. The first club in the New York District was founded in Rochester in 1916. The Queens West Division of the New York District currently has 17 clubs.

"Kiwanis, in general, is a lot of work and a commitment to the community, however, what it does is it challenges you...if you want to grow as an individual, it challenges you, it forces you to learn different things," said JP DiTroia, Lieutenant Governor of Kiwanis Queens West.

In June 2010, at the 2010 international convention in Las Vegas, Kiwanis pledged to raise $110 million and joined UNICEF to eliminate maternal and neonatal tetanus from countries still affected by the disease. This cause is known as Project Eliminate.

Since Project Eliminate

began, the Queens West Division has been steadfast in raising money for this cause through several fundraising events.

One such event was the fundraiser wedding they held for the Kiwanis mascot, Kiwally the Koala, where the club raised $5,400 for Project Eliminate. That money went to save over 3,000 babies, according to DiTroia.

"We have raised, our division, over $42,000 in four years," DiTroia said of his club's progress with Project

Eliminate.

For donating $1,500, DiTroia received the Centennial Award and pin from the Kiwanis.

"I'm thrilled," DiTroia said of being presented the Centennial Award. "It's important to me, not just because I got the award, but the importance that I'm showing my fellow Kiwanians that it can be done. The reward in itself is saving the babies, but certainly to be recognized by your peers is the ultimate honor."

The Queens West Division is also involved with many other organizations such as the Heartshare School, the Ronald McDonald House, among others, according to DiTroia.

"We raised money, $2,200, for pediatric Lyme disease," DiTroia added.

The Kiwanis continues to add new members and grow both locally and internationally, helping those in need across the globe with its charitable donations.

Join your local Kiwanis club!
